

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A system and method of organizing the routine quality control tests performed in a clinical laboratory such that verification of the analytical machines is based on sound statistical principles.

A computer-based program which requests that information be entered by an operator, then supplies the necessary guidance to locate the control tests in position and time to assure statistical validity. A data-management tool to facilitate compliance with government and professional standards of procedure.